The Minister of International Trade & Industry, Malaysia will be leading a business delegation to the United States and will update and discuss the latest political and economic situations in Malaysia, trade and investment opportunities in the manufacturing and manufacturing-related services sectors, trade opportunities between the United States and Malaysia as well as the latest development on the ASEAN Free Trade Area (AFTA). The program will also provide opportunities to meet with representatives from Malaysian companies in the bio-technology, medical devices, electronics, information and communication technology (ICT), engineering and machinery, banking and tourism sectors. The Malaysian delegation will also include officials responsible for trade, investment, R&D activities, multimedia and hi-tech industries.

The Malaysian economy recorded strong growth of 5.3% in 2005. Rising consumer and business confidence and investments, along with underlying economic fundamentals, contributed to this positive performance. For 2006, the economy is expected to grow at 6.0 percent.

The growth momentum will be led by the manufacturing sector, export, domestic consumption and private investments. Malaysia's strength also lies in its political stability, diversified economy, sound legal framework, well-developed infrastructure, reliable financial systems and educated and productive workforce.

Malaysia is currently the 18th largest trading nation in the world. In 2005, Malaysia was also the USA's 10th largest trading partner. Two-way trade between the US and Malaysia has increased four fold since 1990 to reach US$ 44 billion.

How can you benefit from this growing economy? And as Malaysia continues to develop its diversified manufacturing, agricultural and competitive services sectors, what role and specific business opportunities are there for foreign investors? How is Malaysia adjusting to the competition - and opportunities - of China's and India's growing economic might in the region?

As participants in the program, you will have the opportunity to hear directly from the Minister on these key areas and also matters related to your business interest. You will also have the opportunity to meet and discuss with leading Malaysian businessmen on business opportunities in the country and the region.
